In the heart of the enigmatic Galapagos Islands, where Charles Darwin first conceived his groundbreaking theory of evolution, a group of scientists, explorers, and seekers embark on a life-changing expedition that will forever alter their understanding of the natural world and their own place within it.

As they navigate the archipelago's diverse landscapes, encountering its iconic wildlife and deciphering the intricate web of life that sustains it, they grapple with profound questions about humanity's relationship with nature, the nature of evolution, and the very essence of existence.

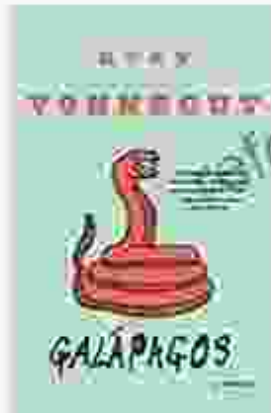

Interwoven with Darwin's own writings and reflections, Galapagos Novel Delta Fiction explores the cutting-edge of scientific research and challenges our preconceived notions about the boundaries between species, the role of chance in shaping the course of evolution, and the resilience of life in the face of adversity.
