Here is an excerpt from the book:

“ "I remember the day my father left for Iraq. I was 16 years old, and I was terrified. I knew that my father was going to a dangerous place, and I was afraid that I would never see him again.

My father hugged me and told me that he would be okay. He told me that he would be home soon. I tried to be brave, but I couldn't help but cry.

My father left, and I watched him go. I stood there for a long time, just staring at the empty road. I felt so alone.

But then I remembered my father's words. He had told me that he would be okay. He had told me that he would be home soon.

And I knew that he would." "
