What makes these lagoons so special?

There are a number of factors that make the Mosquito Lagoon and North Indian River Lagoon so special for fly fishing.

- The water clarity is excellent. This makes it easy to see the fish, even in deeper water.
- The lagoons are relatively shallow. This means that the fish are often found in close proximity to the shore, making them easy to target.

- The lagoons are home to a variety of structure. This includes oyster bars, mangrove trees, and seagrass beds. This structure provides cover for the fish and makes it easier for them to ambush prey.

What fish can you expect to catch?

The Mosquito Lagoon and North Indian River Lagoon are home to a wide variety of fish, including:

- Redfish are one of the most popular targets for fly fishermen in these lagoons. They are a hard-fighting fish that can reach up to 40 inches in length.
- Speckled trout are another popular target for fly fishermen. They are a smaller fish than redfish, but they are just as hard-fighting. Speckled trout can reach up to 24 inches in length.
- Snook are a powerful fish that can reach up to 50 inches in length. They are a popular target for fly fishermen because they are so strong and acrobatic.
- Tarpon are a large, powerful fish that can reach up to 8 feet in length. They are a popular target for fly fishermen because they are so challenging to catch.
- Cobia are a large, migratory fish that can reach up to 6 feet in length. They are a popular target for fly fishermen because they are so good to eat.

What gear do you need?

The type of gear you need for fly fishing in the Mosquito Lagoon and North Indian River Lagoon will depend on the type of fish you are targeting.

For redfish, speckled trout, and snook, a 7- or 8-weight fly rod with a floating line is a good choice. For tarpon, you will need a heavier rod, such as a 9- or 10-weight. For cobia, you will need a very heavy rod, such as a 12-weight.

The flies you choose will also depend on the type of fish you are targeting. For redfish, speckled trout, and snook, small flies, such as Clousers, Deceivers, and Gurglers, are a good choice. For tarpon, you will need larger flies, such as streamers and poppers. For cobia, you will need very large flies, such as crabs and eels.

When is the best time to fish?

The best time to fish the Mosquito Lagoon and North Indian River Lagoon is during the spring and fall. The water is warmer during these months, and the fish are more active.

However, you can catch fish in these lagoons year-round. During the summer, the fish will be found in deeper water. During the winter, the fish will be found in shallower water.

Where can you find a guide?

If you are new to fly fishing or if you want to learn more about the Mosquito Lagoon and North Indian River Lagoon, you can hire a guide. A guide can help you find the fish, choose the right flies, and improve your casting skills.

There are a number of guides who operate in the Mosquito Lagoon and North Indian River Lagoon. You can find a guide by searching online or by asking at your local fly shop.
